NATIONAL REPUBLICAN TICKET. RUTHERFORD B. HAYES,

VICE PRESIDENT,
WILLIAM A. WHEELER, OF NEW YORK.

THERE seems to be quite a spirited ontest going on among our Republican riends over in Belmont county, for the lifterent nouthstone, which will come different nominations which will come before the Convention to be held at Barnesville on the 29th of June. There several candidates for the nomination of Sheriff, and among the rest we notice our friend in W. McFabland of EUROPEAN CORRESPONDENCE Letter from Rev. D. W. Fisher, of Wheeling. BELFAST, IRELAND, June, 1876.

What do I think of I reland? Before I proceed to answer this question perhaps I helicerter state what have seen of me country! Dur company I famile at Queenstown, thence we came up to Cork. After having visited that city and neighborhood, we came by railroad to Mallow, and on Silbergan pear the appropriate control of the control of the country of th Kilfurnes, near the southwest coast. ence we returned to Mallow by rail, I traveled onward to Dublin. Our to Fatternes, near the southwest coart. Thence we returned to Mallow by rail, and traveled onward to Dublin. Our next journey was northward and across the island to Londonderry, by way of Dundalk and Inniskillen. From London Dundalk and Inniskillen. From Londonderry, we went east and north to Port Rush and the Gimt's Chuseway. That is the most northern extremity of Ireland. From the Causeway we returned softhward to Belfast. From this city we go to lasgow, Scotland.

It will be perceived therefore, by con-It will be perceived therefore, by consulting a map, that we have almost crossed the isfand four times and have gone from its southern to its northern extremity. In this journey we have spent between eight and nine days. It is true that this is not so much time as could be desired to enable one to see a people. But, at the other hand, it is to be remembered that Ireland is not a very larger country, and that it has no great cities besides, and no districts very different from those which we have visited; and eightor nine days is a good while to a man who keeps moving and has his eyes open.

NATURAL SCENERY.

Nature has done much for Ireland.

Nature has done much for Ireland. The scenery is very beautiful. The southern country especially is charming. While most of the land, scapable of cultivation, there are a few flat plains such as abound in the United States. Gently undulating fulls are the predominant features of the landscape. But I was rather surprised to see so many mountains. None of these are very high, but they are so common that the traveler is acarcely every out of a sight of them. I shall as rule all the country, except the mountains, is covered with the deepest green. Most of the soil is used for graning and for the railing of wheat, harley, oats, potatoes and flax. Occasionally a forest is met, mostly artificial, But let the vegetation by what it may, it has a despite of greenness which can be appreciated only those who are it. greeness which can be appreciated only by those who see it. The mountains when of any considerable height are brown, rocky and barren. CULTIVATION.

Man also has done much to beautify the island. In the South especially the eyes of the traveler are often attracted by the dwelling and grounds of some gentleman. The sites of these places are apt to be very beautiful, and to show in the sur very beautiful, and to show in the sur-roundings the aims of the most cultivated taste. The roads are perhaps anequished in the world. Built during the jamine for the most part, they then furnished employment for the people, and now they are among the best improvements to be seen. And withal, there are scat-tered everywhere the ruins of castles and abligns and churches about which history and romance cluster, and which, covered with ivy and beautiful for situation, still delight the eye of the beholder.

PARTICULAR LOCALITIES. In some localities there is scenery which has a world-wide reputation. Who has not heard of the Lakes of Killarney? And they are a marvel of beauty. There are many spots on earth where more sub-lime views can be had, but few where so much that is picturesque, and yet varied is concentrated. The Giants Causeway is a world's wonder in the way of a curios-ity. As a scene it is disappointing. THE DARK SIDE. After reading the above some one may be ready to conclude that Ireland is the best land on earth. Far enough from it, It might be, but it is not. The country is ac ontradiction. It is a contrast with it self. It is the best, and it is among the worst portions of the British empire. In-deed it consists of two parts geographi-cally, which differ most widely from each Ulster and the North constitute cany, which direr most wheely ragin each other. Ubster and the North constitute a distinct people. And much that I shall write here concerning the dark side of things does not apply to them.

Many of the people in the other portion of the sand are poor beyond description. They are also very ignorant escapaced with the inhabitants of the United States or of Scotland. And they are distinct of the control of the sand without a floor. The cow, the pig, and the chickens, all have free access to the door. In the yard is the stable, and very often at the door is a pool of dirty water, where the drainage collects. And the beggary is a shameled or rather most shameless. Think of barefooted young ad the chickens, all have free access to do door. In the yard is the stable, and rry often at the door is a pool of dirty ater, where the drainage collects. And a exchange has discovered a new reason why Hayes will carry the English and German vote alike. Commencing in the begary is a famile of the commencing in the commencing in the commencing in the commencing in the English "yes," while going the other way it reveals the German "yah!"

I have excepted Ulster and the North in this picture of the dark side of things. And no faithful observer could do otherwise. I would mention things which are not commenciale there. But on the whose, while the soil is not apparent ly as rich as that of the Gouth, we meet there with an industrious and intelligent people. Beliast resembles an Americancity both as to the rapidity of its growth and its general appearance. It is a bright busy place, with well suffit houses, and humming manufactories.

busy place, with well built houses, and humming manufactories.

THE SECURT.

THE SECURT.

Why is so much of Ireland in its present lowly estate? It is not the fault of the soil or the climate. They are cholve in every way. It is not inherent in the people. The race is hardy and vigorous. From it have sprung many of the best menof modera time. The Irish politic clim might tell you that it is English power which curses the country. Probably diairs are not always wisely administered by the government as now constituted. But, however well home rulemay answer as a party watchword, there is not much substance, in the promises which makes. Probably the country is agrited as well governed as it would be if there was a party watchword, there is not much substance, in the promises which is makes. Probably the country is agrited as well governed as it would be if there was a parliament at Dublin.

ROMANISM.

There are two things which, fir my judgment, curse Ireland. In mentioning one of them I shall no doubt offend some persons. But I must express my convictions drawn from reading, conversation, and personal observation. The type of religion which prevails weight like an incurso on the people. Romanism of the extreme sout here regime with grayer power than in almost any other country in Europe. It dominates by the consent of the people, but if dominates. And is has not dopn what it ought, to make the people intelligent, cleanly, and superior to beggary. Romanism does not dominate in Using and the North; and there is a diffessent, people, as a consequence, in that quarter.

THE LANDLORD SYSTEM.

THE LANDLORD SYSTEM. tion of Sheriff, and among the rest we notice our friend he W. MeFarland by East Richland township. We think the Republicans of Belmont countywould do well to honor him as their, choice, as he would no doubt be elected, and if elected would make a good officer (TOR) H. The land is eleased to tenants, and many cases the agent is the only person with whost the tenant has to deal in rewith whom the tenant has to deaf in regard to his lease. The landlord is a stranger to his own people, and perhaps sometimes cares only for the money which his agent; pays to him. The leases are often precarious. They may depend on the whim of the agent. How can an agricultural country prosper under such a system? It would destroy any people. The incentive to effort is gone. I do not wonder that so much land is being turned into fields for grazing. Donkeys, and sheep and cows can flourish better under such a state of things than it is possible for men to do.

such a state of things than it is possible for men to do.

If a man is wealthy he need not wish for a more attractive home than he can make himself in this green Isle. Culture and refinement reveal themselves in the abodes of the wealthy. But the poor man has before him little prospects of rising in the world. Only in a place like Belfant is it possible in any considerable degree. I wonder not that so many hundreds of thousands of Irishmen have sought a new home in the United States. If our own country lacks much that is attractive to the traveler in Ireland, it is at least a land where the poorest may rise to any eminence of culture and influence.

It has not been my purpose in this letter to describe particular objects of interest. To do this would require many letters. I have preferred rather to give general impressions.

D. W. F.

and, if any man can, he can carry the disputed Western States.

Reporter—You think, thus, that the Tammany opposition does not amount to anything which would necessitate his rejection by the Convention.

Mr. Morrissey-Certainly I do. As I said before, it is not the first time he has been opposed by those fallows. What was the result? Why he carried the State, and triumphantly planted the slag of the arty on the ramparts of the enemy. The nomination of Hayes was a concession by the Republicans that reform was needed.

the Republicans that reform was needed. Shall we how go back on that idea which has gained as all we have achieved? To do so is to invite defeater.

Mr. Morissey was very positive in his views, and spoke as if fully convinced of the importance of the truth of his convictions.

HE WASN'T USED TO IT.—A man from the Far West arrived in the city Saturday, Yesterday, he gathered a knot of friends about him, and attracted general sympathy by the tale he told of his trouble with dies at early dawn. He eard:
"Your know how warm it was shin morning; a fellow souldn'r keer; any of his bedictothes on him to, save his lite. Well; I was jost more'n enjoying myself snooting, away about 6 o'clock, when the sun got fairly, into the room an the flies woke up. As soon as they woke up they went for me. It's my opinion they took me for the Black Hills and went-prospectin'. It wasn't sany use slappan at em; they'd fly away for a minute when you did, and then come back again ferreer'n ever. I watched 'em as they'd light on, me and explore me. One feller'd find a place that seemed to him to promise pay dirt, an' then he'd make a motion to she gather fellers an' they'd gather round an' sock in their worse na els. Then there was a class or worse na eel. Then there was a class or in their wicks as make me squirm worse'n an eel. Then there was a class or worse han er. I nen there was a class of two studying realizably and geology too. Old fires leading a class of little ones. The boss fly, would trot around over me, pointing out to the others how the land lay all about the mountains an canyons an foot hills, an then they'd all chip in an foot hills, an then they of all chip in together for geological specimens, an make me squirm some mers of tell you it was awn!! I've it injuns on the plains, but it warn't nothing to files these mornin's. I'm just a mass o' red any white minin' region, chipped all over with them darned surface diggin's. An I'm goin't og it out o' town, an away from lies afore night."

mile, to lry to persuade you to drink a little whiskey, and eager to scope the penny which you toos to them. That is the style of things at Killarney. Indeed everywhere in the South and Middle persition of Ireland, we found the lower class eager to obtain a gratuity by any pretext. And even the cities bear the impress of this degredation. Cork has in it some of the most miserable and fifthy streets which cin be imagined. I doubt if anywhere else in Europe the equal of tone of its markets for old was can be not perfectly the programmes. Per some of the rest in have on them the trail of the serpent. Being a large party of travelers we were not airaid to penetrate the tyways of the cities; and we have seen sights which are astounding.
